If you find the manual you need on an online auction site, check the shipping details so you know how much to add to the price and how long it should take for your manual to arrive. MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET Your LG phone's Subscriber Identity Module, or SIM, provides your cellular phone number and allows a GSM network to direct calls to your phone. This phone number is exclusively tracked by the card, rather than the phone, which means upgrading your business phone is as simple as moving the SIM card to another phone. The SIM card is installed in the LG phone's battery compartment, so you must remove the battery before removing the SIM card. Press and hold the "Power" button to shut off your LG phone. Remove the phone's back cover. This requires sliding the cover down or gently prying it up using the fingernail groove. The exact method of removal depends on the model of LG phone. Lift up on the bottom of the battery to remove it. The SIM card is located beneath the battery. On some LG phones, the SIM card is located just above the battery within the battery compartment. Slide the SIM card away from the slot to remove it. By Charlotte Mission i George Doyle & Ciaran Griffin/Stockbyte/Getty Images LG TracFones utilize the CDMA network structure, which requires the use of subscriber identity modules, or SIM cards, to store important information about cell phones' services and contents. The first SIM cards were created in the early 1990's Although these early devices were the size of credit cards, their current miniature dimensions still enable them hold large amounts of data, such as the account's phone number, network authentication information, text messages and phone book contacts. Your LG TracFone will not function if the SIM card isn't installed properly, so getting this process right is imperative. Turn the phone off and disconnect the charger as well as any headphones or other devices. Slide off the back cover and remove the battery from the internal compartment. The SIM card slot is under the battery. Align the notch at the top of the SIM card with the notch in the slot. Slide the SIM card into the slot with the gold side facing down. Make sure it lays flat. Replace the battery and the cover. Turn the phone back on to ensure you installed everything correctly. Need help inserting the SIM card/SD Card or removing them on your LG Classic Flip?
